as we see it

Every time we publish a story on Arthur Godfrey, the mailman groans. He knows he'll be hauling extra loads to our offices, loads of letters saying (a), "Why do you print so much stuff about that bum Godfrey? He's not worth the space you spend praising him," and (b), "How dare you say nasty things about Arthur? He's wonderful."

The answer to (a) is that Godfrey, whether you like him or not, is an important part of television and has a huge and loyal audience. As to (b), we've quoted his critics—including his former employes—and we have quoted Godfrey. Our articles on him are as objective as we can make them.

This issue we conclude a two-part resume of Godfrey's relations with the press. Why? Because he's news; he's one of TV's most controversial personalities, and people talk about him. We think the reactions of newspapermen who have had direct contact with him and the people around him are of interest.

When a star is on the way up, he usually goes out of his way to be nice to the press. He has time to chat with the boys. When he's an established star, his responsibilities increase, for it takes harder work to stay on top than it does to get there. There are more demands on his time. He also is more wary of newspapermen.

Godfrey is no exception. He's an important personality, and he knows it. He's busy, and he's fighting to stay on top. He's not so concerned with the fickle press.

We neither condone nor condemn this attitude. We merely want to point out that so long as Godfrey continues to be popular with his following and continues to make news, he's going to stay on top, no matter what the newspaper—and magazine—writers say about him.

NEW YORK Bob Stahl reports:

NBC has finally snagged a sponsor for its Wide Wide World, so the show starts Oct. 16 as a regular Sunday afternoon feature two weeks of every four. The other two Sundays will have the MAURICE EVANS "spectaculars" and TV Opera Theater . . . BOBBY CLARK and BURR TILLSTROM added to the cast of "Alice in Wonderland," EVANS' first "spectacular" Oct. 23.

CBS planning GEORGE GERSHWIN's "Porgy and Bess" in color . . . Appointment with Adventure will be all new from skin out when sponsor renews contract Oct. 2. Show, now called Opening Night, will drop emphasis on adventure plots, and air dramas of all types.

Despite the many rumors that the top prize on The $64,000 Question will be upped to induce someone to go for the jackpot, the producers say it just isn't so -- at least, for the time being . . . Topper, canceled off CBS, will turn up on ABC, holding down the Monday-night-at-7:30 (ET) period starting Oct. 3.

Several new projects added to CBS' slate of Saturday night "spectaculars": a dramatization of JIM BISHOP's best-seller, "The Day Lincoln Was Shot"; an original libretto by SAM and BELLA SPEWACK to TCHAIKOVSKY's "Nutcracker Suite," and a Christmas presentation of MAURICE MAETERLINCK's "The Bluebird."

CBS, still struggling for the right format for its Morning Show, has a new idea on tap: BILL LEONARD, local New York CBS commentator, will do feature stories; CHARLES COLLINGWOOD will continue with the news, and BOB KEESHAN, original "Clarabell" on Howdy Doody, will do a kid show, "Captain Kangaroo." And the two-hour spread might move from 7-to-9 to 8-to-10 A.M. (ET).

Let's Take a Trip will join with Adventure for a special one-shot visit to the solar system on a Sunday afternoon in October . . . Both programs, incidentally, resume on a regular weekly basis starting Sept. 25.

With EDWARD R. MURROW's See It Now scheduled only sporadically this season, ERIC SEVAREID may add MURROW's news commentary chores to his American Week. Instead of roaming the news each Sunday as he did last season, SEVAREID plans to cover only one subject each week "in depth" . . . WALTER CRONKITE signed to narrate at least some of CBS' projected Conquest of the Air series, slated to premiere sometime next year.

Butch Brown, leader of the jazz orchestra that forms one segment of the upcoming Mickey Mouse Club, is the teen-age son of bandleader LES BROWN . . . Now they're talking about bringing Tarzan to TV via a film series.

FRANKIE SAYS:

'TV Racket's Too Tough!'

But Networks Still Wave Contracts Under The Sensitive Sinatra Nose

"Television is too tough," said Frank Sinatra, breathing hard into the telephone.

He had been chin-deep in a recording session at 20th Century-Fox all afternoon and had just about run out of voice, both singing and speaking.

To Sinatra, television is about as tough as Sinatra himself is for a reporter to track down. This can be compared, roughly, to trying to thread a needle with a pair of ill-fitting greased boxing gloves.

A notorious will-o'-the-wisp, Sinatra has an infinite capacity for making himself unavailable—and not only to the press. He just recently made himself unavailable to NBC, a large, well-heeled organization which had been dangling a long-term contract under the sensitive Sinatra nose.

"I didn't like it," the singer said, thus ending that particular phase of the conversation.

"I made a deal with 'em to do 'Our Town' on Producers' Showcase next Monday," he admitted, "and naturally I'll go through with it. It's a great script. David Shaw wrote it. Fred Coe will produce it. He's the greatest. Eva Marie Saint and Paul Newman will play the youngsters. Sammy Cahn has written a great score. I dunno who else will be in it. We're gonna release the music a little ahead of time so the public will be familiar with it."

This is possibly the longest offstage statement Sinatra ever made.

Paradoxically, Sinatra has been at once successful and unsuccessful in his past TV ventures. He has come off as an affable, genial, thoroughly relaxed individual with a knack for kidding both the show and himself. But if he came off well, most of the shows never did.

He has twice had his own show on the air, has twice seen the ventures go by the boards while watching the Gleasons and the Caesars and the Sullivans climb onward and upward.

Eva Marie Saint: she'll play one of the youngsters in 'Our Town.'

Just learning: Sinatra, as a young priest, with Fred MacMurray in 1948's 'The Miracle of the Bells,' in which he admits his acting was 'awful.' Film is now on TV.

did not refuse to appear on Toast of the Town, and during which he took an ad in a trade paper to tell the smiling one that he, Sullivan, was "sick, sick, sick," Sinatra expressed surprise and said, "Gee, I'd forgotten all about that.")

More recently, the former idol of the now-grown bobby-soxers has taken to doing guest spots on a spectacular or two, but he claims now that his "Our Town" venture will be his last TV outing for some time.

"I have no definite TV plans at all," he says. "Racket's too tough. I like movies better."

(Less than 24 hours after making this statement, Sinatra was closeted with Harry Ackerman, CBS director of special projects, who was intent on signing the reluctant one for six or eight appearances this coming season.)

Sinatra has just finished "Guys and Dolls" for Sam Goldwyn, is set for "The Man with the Golden Arm." If The Voice keeps this up, he'll have one himself, elbow-deep in a safe deposit box.

Sinatra has twice announced plans for a TV film series, one to have been based on Las Vegas, the other dealing with the return of a man to his boyhood home. Both have been shelved.

"Las Vegas doesn't need it," he says laconically, "and I just don't have time for the other one. I don't have time for anything any more. I'm up to my—well, I'm busy."

Sinatra gets a kick out of the current rebirth of a 1948 picture he made, "The Miracle of the Bells," which is now making the Late, Late Show rounds on TV. In it, he plays a young priest, walking through the role with all the grace and animation of a wooden Indian.

"Pretty awful, wasn't it?" he admits cheerfully.

Yet, just five years later he won an Academy Award as the year's best supporting actor in "From Here to Eternity."

"Takes a guy that long to learn how to act," he explains briefly. "You gotta keep watching all the other guys and pretty soon you absorb enough of it or it just rubs off on you or something. Anyway, you learn."

Always an individualist, with his own ideas as to the nature of things in general and society in particular, Sinatra still does not enjoy what might be called a good press. He has his own private blacklist of newspapermen and columnists whom he flatly refuses to see, but he can be reasonably civil to those he figures won't put a knife in his back.

Such things, however, do not seem to bother Sinatra in the slightest. "Life is great, just great," he says, almost enthusiastically. "In fact, it couldn't be better."—Dan Jenkins

UNCLE MILTIE GOES WEST

Berle Changes Base Of Operations, Is Greeted By Hoopla, Jerry Lewis—And Esther Williams

Milton Berle has finally pulled up his seven-year-old TV stakes in New York and made the move to Hollywood, where he will do 13 hour-long color shows this coming season.

As befits a star of his magnitude, Berle was met by newsmen, network executives, photographers, press agents and the usual group of show girls.

Also on hand were Esther Williams, guest on his first show, and Jerry Lewis, organizer of a Go-Home-Berle-Unfair-to-Hollywood-Comedians picket line. It was great publicity, but it didn't change Milton's mind. He now calls Hollywood "home."

Hail, the hero: A couple of actors, dressed as Keystone Comedy cops, carry Milton Berle from plane in Los Angeles, after he greeted Esther Williams (above), first show's star.

With comedian Jerry Lewis, Berle strides from airport to plan for new season.

Nail-biter: pressure of directing 'The Diamond Curtain' shows clearly in John Newland's nervous concentration.

Working Up An Appetite

Actor John Newland Finds Directing Rugged

No detail too small: he checks an actress' hair-do.

Quite possibly the most familiar face among the scores that have appeared during the past five and a half years in the cast of Robert Montgomery Presents belongs to John Newland.

Since the Montgomery show first went on the air in the spring of 1949, Newland has turned up at the studio with the consistency of the milkman. He has been seen on the program more than 30 times, cast as playboy, war correspondent, stuffy husband, maladjusted veteran, absentminded professor and understanding brother-in-law. "In fact," says Newland, "I've played everything but second base."

Right now, however, Newland's face is being seen behind the cameras more often than in front of them. He was signed last spring to direct six of Montgomery's 10 summer shows and will continue this fall as director of one out of every three of the Montgomery shows, seen Monday nights on NBC. In addition, he'll probably act in most of the shows he doesn't direct.

Rehearsal over, he still has strength to eat. ▶

As an actor, Newland had to worry about only one man's lines. As a director, he has to worry about everybody in the cast. "It's a rugged job," he readily admits.

Why did he swap the relatively carefree life of an actor for the hard work and heavy responsibility of a director? "Well," says Newland, "as a director, an actor may eat with plausible regularity. And I frequently get hungry!"

With set designer Syrjala and lighting expert Phil Hymes he talks techniques.

Exhausted, he flops on a couch to instruct actress Dorothy Griffin in role.

Tramp: all dressed up as a vagabond, Judy Garland rehearses for her TV debut.

A TV Star Is Born

Judy Garland To Make Her TV Debut As 'Lead-Off Hitter' In New Series

Judy Garland, who, at only 33, is already both a veteran and a legend of show business, makes her television debut as an entertainer Saturday, Sept. 24, on the first of CBS' new Saturday night series of 90-minute programs, Ford Star Jubilee.

And she's both excited and scared about the venture. "I'll probably come out on the stage, take one look at those three-eyed TV monsters and faint dead away. And then where am I going to find another medium to make my comeback?

"But I'm not going to worry about it," she adds. "I'll just work my head off, get good and sick 30 minutes before air time, and by Sunday morning we'll know whether or not I've laid an egg."

She won't.

Chicago Dateline

WTTW, Chicago's educational television station, Ch. 11, begins a two-day-a-week schedule of test programs Monday, Sept. 19. Test shows will be broadcast between 4 and 10 P.M. every Monday and Friday from the Chicago Board of Education studio until late fall, when permanent studios are completed. The station will then begin its full schedule of 30 hours a week.

The long-established Chicago interview offering, Hi Ladies, with Mike Douglas, bows off the video channels with the Sept. 23 show. Beginning Monday, Sept. 26, Ch. 9 will offer early-morning viewers two shows which were highly successful during the evening hours. My Little Margie will be seen from 10 to 10:30 and Stu Erwin from 10:30 to 11 each weekday morning.

Ch. 2 is planning to do another country and Western music show. It is tentatively scheduled for the first week in October with Pat Buttram calling out the square-dance numbers as host.

Pert songstress Pat Scot of In Town Tonight will cover both coasts on her vacation, first heading westward and then winging back to New York City to wind it up. Bette Chapel takes over the female vocalizing chores on the show in her absence.

The late Norman Ross, Sr., will appear on "Yesterday's Newsreel," which is a feature on Mid-day Matinee (of which young Ross is the host) Sept. 21. While screening newsreels recently, Norman found one, from the year 1930, in which his father, an Olympic long-distance swimming champion, was swimming the Catalina channel in Southern California.

A new format is being tried out on the Mahalia Jackson show. It features audience participation in the hymns Mahalia-style, and will be continued if found to be successful.

Life With Father*, which bowed on Ch. 9 Sept. 11, is being tossed around a bit. It will remain in the 8:30-to-9 slot this week only. On Sept. 25 it will move to a spot following the baseball games, after which it will establish permanent residence in the 6 P.M. time slot on Oct. 2.

music by James VAN HEUSEN • lyrics by Sammy CAHN

COLOR "Our Town," 17 years old now, has become a musical. David Shaw has adapted the script. The songs have been written by James Van Heusen and Sammy Cahn.

Sinclair Lewis familiarized a generation of Americans with a satiric view of the American small town. Wilder's play reverses the trend, and takes a loving look at the inhabitants of the typical town of Grover's Corners. The plot is pegged on the lives of a boy and a girl in the town, and follows them through romance, marriage and death.

Act 1: It's May 1901. The act opens at dawn on a street in Grover's Corners. The cameras rave through the Gibbs' and Webbs' homes and the office of the Grover's Corners Sentinel.

Songs: "Our Town"..."Grover's Corners"..."The Impatient Years."

Act 2: Now it's July 1904. Again we enter the Gibbs' and Webbs' homes, then travel to an area near the school, the drugstore soda fountain and the church.

Songs: "Love and Marriage"..."A Perfect Married Life"..."The Impatient Years" (reprise)..."Wasn't It A Wonderful Wedding?"

Act 3: Nine years have passed. It's summer 1913. The scene is the cemetery. Flashbacks take us back to 1899. We return to the town in 1913, where the play closes.

Song: "Look to Your Heart."

Versatile Ernie

Altogether too many times have passed that I planned to write and did not. I feel I must be but one of a great many thousands who enjoy, so thoroughly, the Tennessee Ernie Ford Show each morning. His variety show is all clean fun and Ernie can be humorous or serious as well. Our family particularly enjoys his spiritual for the day. He is one of the finest personalities on TV.—Mrs. E. Hansen, Kenosha, Wis.

Country-style Entertainment

I would like very much to thank the sponsors of the Pee Wee King Show. It features one of the finest group of men any band could have. It's most enjoying to look forward to this show every Saturday night. Hope it will continue for a long time.—Mrs. Bruce Church, Rochester, Wis.

Tired Of Repeats

As much as my family and I like Disneyland, we are sick and tired of the same old stuff every week. I cannot see why Walt Disney does not take one of his pictures and show the whole thing. If the picture is too long, he could cut it or make it last a couple of weeks like he did Davy Crockett.—Janet Trowbridge, Hammond, Ind.

Slight Mix-up

My husband and I have a little bet on. He says that Caesar Petrillo on In Town Tonight isn't the Petrillo who is head of the musicians union and I say he is. Can you tell us who is right?—Mrs. E. H. Hall, Chicago. [Not the same. Heading the musicians union is James C. Petrillo, a brother.—ED.]

Arthur Often Wonders If All Those Stories Can Really Be About Him

Shortly after the firing of Julius La Rosa and its backwash of press comment, Arthur Godfrey told an American Weekly interviewer: "I learned a long time ago to read as little as possible about myself. First they build you up; then they tear you down.

"While they were building me up, I quit reading the stuff because it embarrassed me. When the tide turned this year and the boys began tearing me down, a couple of good friends of mine told me not to read it. They said I've got enough to do without taking on any extra worries.

"I thought about it for a while and decided they were right, because, no matter what they say about me on the front page, there are a couple of lines on a back page which continued say that from 10 A.M. until 11:30 A.M. I'll be on radio and television five days a week, and on Monday and Wednesday nights, and, by golly, I know that's right."

But the fact is that American newspapers have been printing laudatory tidbits about Godfrey for years. A New York Post article termed Godfrey's newspaper coverage "probably the best press ever accorded as celebrity, in or out of show business."

"Dames and guys, city slickers and country rubes, all like him," declared columnist Earl Wilson. "If he'd been around, Hatfield and McCoy would never have feuded—they'd have been down at the barbershop, laughing about Arthur Godfrey."

Adding to the chorus of praise were:

Columnist Robert Ruark: "I love this ancient urchin . . . His energy is limitless, his wit the liveliest, his friendship boundless, and . . . he should live, already, another 100 years."

John Crosby: "His freckles and ruddy complexion contribute a good deal to a personality that is easily one of the wonders of our times."

Jack Gould: "Visually Mr. Godfrey is a wow—the freshest, most personable and most engaging comedian to be seen in years."

Kay Cardella, New York Daily News: "Arthur Godfrey will definitely return . . . This is the best news we've heard yet—even better than those color-TV stories. You can keep your tinted video. Just give us Godfrey."

But these halcyon days are past. With relatively few exceptions, the Nation's newspaper writers now seem hostile to their onetime buddy. Circumstances alter cases, of course. But were circumstances—or changes in the Godfrey personality—to blame?

Press was most sympathetic to Godfrey at

It's no longer the same Arthur Godfrey, suggested the New York Daily News' Ben Gross, who, two years ago, summed up the secret of Godfrey's appeal in these words: "It is his friendliness, his good cheer, his small-boy mischievousness and his kindly philosophy . . . Or maybe it's his magnetism, his personal attractiveness."

Last May, Gross was singing a considerably less friendly tune: "Arthur complained that most radio-TV writers who slam him don't know a thing about him . . . But what he forgot to add is that to see the Great Man requires the eating of more humble pie than trying to interview the Queen of England. He is the master of the brush-off, with a generally contemptuous manner toward newspapermen."

This wasn't true in his Washington days, when Godfrey maintained a sizable, bar-equipped office and used to tell newspapermen: "I built the place for you fellows."

In November, 1950, Bernie Harrison, now with the Washington Evening Star, was writing: "I see very little difference between the Godfrey of the networks and the Godfrey of WJSV. His red hair may be fading, but his time of his 1953 hip operation in Boston.

puckish sense of humor is still intact. Maybe you can't reach him as easily as you could, but then more people are trying to reach him now."

At almost the same time, the San Francisco Chronicle's Terrence O'Flaherty wrote: "In his relations with columnists (Godfrey) has often been split-tongued and slithery-tailed . . . ungentlemanly . . ."

John Crosby, one of the most caustic critics of Godfrey and just about everyone else on TV, thought Godfrey's physical condition might have something to do with his peevishness.

"Godfrey seemed tired and heavy-hearted on his last show, and for good reason," Crosby wrote at the close of the 1953-54 season. "He has been in pain and he has had a pretty bad press this year. He's not entirely blameless for the bad press. Discussing the drinking habits of his associates on a national network is not calculated to endear him to just everyone. Still, the pain in his hip can be blamed at least partly for the Godfrey indiscretions."

Actually, however, the Godfrey characteristics which have been getting him into hot water with the press have always been part of the Godfrey make-up—as was duly noted.

Reported Time in February, 1950: "Close associates say that Godfrey's contrariness is his outstanding characteristic . . . He is confusingly shy one minute and brash the next, sentimental and savage, generous and stingy, as quick to unreasoning affection as unreasoning dislike. Every confirmed Godfrey fan knows that from one moment to the next he may erupt into ribaldry, beery pathos or waspish exasperation.

This analysis seems as accurate now as then. So why did the press stop finding these traits "lovable?"

The answer seems to lie in the fact that most Americans sympathize with the underdog. They prefer to root for David rather than Goliath. When Godfrey played fast and loose on the air with commercials, sponsors, his network employers or Congressmen, he was a brash, but admirable individualist battling against opponents stronger than himself.

The La Rosa firing, however, suddenly changed the complexion of things. Godfrey's role was suddenly switched—from hero to villain, from crusader to bully.

Godfrey is now embarked on an all-out feud with the press. In recent interviews with favored newspapermen, he has dwelled on past "errors" by their colleagues. He has promised to even the score in an upcoming autobiography.

Some people believe that in again taking on a huge, institutional opponent like the press, rather than individuals, Godfrey may be making a bid to regain the backing and affection of those of his TV and radio fans who have left him.

If so, he may be making a mistake. He may be alienating them even further. But it's a calculated risk.

and here's how it's done

Make-up artists need an hour or more to apply even a modified disguise to a dramatic actor. But George Fiala and Bill Herman seldom get more than 15 minutes to put on those intricate disguises that mask the identity of guests on ABC's Masquerade Party.

So Fiala, one-time paratrooper, and Herman, former detective, have evolved their own system of constructing their facial disguises. Working from pictures of the guests in their Greenwich Village studio, they use basic head shapes to model the phony noses, ears, chins and whiskers of the disguises. Comes Wednesday night and they cart their material over to the Masquerade Party studio in numbered boxes. And as soon as each guest arrives, Fiala and Herman, who may have spent 15 hours on one disguise, are ready to slap on the paraphernalia.

These pictures of the transformation of lovely Sheree North into an anything-but-lovely French maid, show how the boys work. Sheree carried a tray with a glass of sherry wine to give the panel a clue to her identity.

At studio, he slips mask on, and then (above) he and partner Bill Herman blend on make-up and top it with a black wig.

The Summer Season:

'The $64,000 Question' Was Hottest Of Warm Weather Shows

So far as raising the standards of TV are concerned, the long-promised network summer programs—the ones that were supposed to have been as good as, if not better than, the regular winter fare—have now come and, for the most part, gone. If "good riddance" is too strong a term, and it probably is, let it be said that it was a "normal" summer. As such, it in no way measured up to the exciting promises voiced by the networks.

Only one show, a sleeper with little or no advance publicity, came crashing through to establish itself as a top-flight major entry. That, of course, was The $64,000 Question, whose cultural value to the community can be questioned. Its pure entertainment value, however, is amply reflected in its ratings.

Routine is the word for the rest of the summer fare. Johnny Carson, the bright young comic launched by CBS, is still in the launching stage, still trying to find the cut of his TV jib. Those Whiting Girls inherited the built-in Lucy Monday night audience and may have generated just enough steam of their own to carry them through the winter, sponsor willing. Sid Caesar's Caesar Presents was too much like Caesar's Hour without being as good, which is not the purpose of a summer replacement. George Gobel's And Here's the Show has been a signal failure. And the less said about The Soldiers, the better.

Aside from The $64,000 Question, the only two summer shows to exhibit a little original brightness of their own have been Ethel and Albert and The Dunninger Show, both of them TV veterans of some years' standing. The former was once a regular season entry, and should so remain. It is one of the few intelligently written husband-and-wife situation comedies extant and should be jealously preserved for the benefit of the American sanity. Dunninger, a remarkable mentalist whose thought-reading stunts have floored more than one cynical newsman, is a phenomenon. There aren't many phenomenons on TV.

From a dramatic standpoint, the summer was blessed chiefly with the continuation of such shows as Studio One, Climax!, Kraft Theater and Philco-Goodyear Playhouse. Front Row Center, a new entry, was a disappointment, as was Lux Video's well-intentioned project based on unproduced stories owned by the major movie studios. In most instances, it was quite apparent why the stories had remained unproduced.

Julius La Rosa made a pleasant, if not inspiring, impression in Perry Como's old spot, as did Matt Dennis, subbing for Dinah Shore. Godfrey's

Wednesday night show was given over to Frankie Laine, who poses no immediate threat to the redheaded philosopher of the airwaves; while Jackie Gleason wisely filled his Saturday night spot with the ear-soothing Greatest Bands of America.

As for the "spectaculars," mostly they weren't. "Remember . . . 1938" was a melancholy mishmash. "Svengali and the Blonde" was rescued by Ethel Barrymore. "One Touch of Venus," despite the appealing attractiveness of Janet Blair, can only be described as a bore. But "The King and Mrs. Candle" was an amusing, highly-stylized spoof. The Hume Cronyn-Jessica Tandy tour de force, "The Four Poster," was delightful. And "Wide Wide World" did NBC—and TV—proud.

Good television, apparently, is somewhat akin to the weather. Everybody talks about it, nobody does anything about it—yet occasionally, as though all by itself, along comes that rare day in June. It's the waiting that can kill you.—D. J.

FINE TUNING

Television-telephone demonstrated in California. Wait until this rings while you're in the bathtub.

It's hard to answer the phone when the bell is chiming: "The eyes of Texas are upon you."

When this phone bell rings, only a belle will answer. The average gal may look like "toast of the town" in the evening, but she's no star on the "morning show." She'll have to let the phone ring until she gets rid of the night cream and the hair curlers.

The TV personality she looks most like in the A.M. is on Zoo Parade.

The video-telephone means the end of the blind date. It's hard to convince a guy he has a date with a real doll when he can see the stuffing. He can take one look on the 10-inch screen and let out a 21-inch scream.

The guy who says he's tied up at the office may be tied up in knots. It will be hard to convince the little woman that she's only tuned in to Arthur Murray Dance Party. She knows the private secretary with him isn't Ann Sothern.

The next big novelty will be false faces for the guy who wants to say: "Guess who this is?"

A Noted Commentator Tells:

WHY OUR CHILDREN PROFIT FROM TV

By John Cameron Swayze

Despite the hue and cry from self-appointed critics who fear TV adversely affects children, it strikes me that our generation has profited a very great deal from their video viewings. I'm familiar with the argument that younger folk are being gorged with sadistic blood-and-thunder entertainment via TV. And it's true that a few programs are not what they should be—but to no greater degree than are countless films easily available or, for that matter, certain radio shows, especially during pre-video days.

What is overlooked in these pro and con debates on this question is the simple fact that our youngsters' TV experiences are in no way limited to specifically designed "children's programs," either good or bad; their interest isn't limited to programs tailor-made for their particular age group.

Because of the visual impact and sense of immediacy it conveys, television has captured the child's imagination and boosted interest in areas of thought and activity often considered outside his own sphere. The visual immediacy has given a comprehension of grown-up events to children and young people that neither radio nor the printed word successfully conveyed in the past.

For illustration, let me fall back on my own experiences with the News Caravan program. Many find it surprising that over 35 percent of the weekly mail we receive on this newscast comes from the six-to-16 age bracket. Such a tremendous response from youthful viewers for a program that is not geared solely to them points up the interest TV has uncovered among a vast new audience.

Within one week I recently received letters from an entire elementary class in New Jersey commenting on various aspects of world problems. One 14-year-old from Arkansas wrote to know what I thought of using the H-bomb for defense; a 15-year-old gave her own views about the behind-the-scenes power struggle in the Kremlin; a 10-year-old wrote asking for ideas on the present Administration's foreign policy.

In checking with colleagues, producers, interviewers and others in the TV field, I find that many have similar mail response from youngsters on dramatic shows, political, religious and news programs that were originally planned primarily for adult consumption. That TV has aroused such active interest in shows other than the well-planned and informative children's program is a sound sample of its more laudable contributions to young people's lives. It also points up the interesting side fact that we parents are slow to realize how much youngsters are interested in what's going on in the world beyond their own particular family and school realm.

Another first-hand experience that taught me never to presume I know exactly what fare appeals to children was the reaction of young TV viewers to Sightseeing with the Swayzes. Again this series was meant basically for adult consumption, centering as it does around the travels of myself, Mrs. Swayze, John, Jr., and Suzanne. But it brought a great response from youngsters ranging upward from five and six.

Many wrote thank-you notes, explaining how helpful such programs were to their immediate homework problems in geography and social sciences. Distant places and historical cities, perhaps hard to visualize or remember, came alive with clarity.

Parents, I think, should take advantage of this painless, entertaining "schoolroom," i. e., the TV set, now a permanent part of the parlor, and realize that their offspring are quite capable of interest in good adult programs. They should not be content to see that Johnny views the "right" children's shows; a little effort should be put to surveying personally the type and quality of the many TV programs available and scanning daily schedules for shows overlooked that could spark their child's interest. They may be surprised, as I was, to find that they have been selling young folks a bit short when it comes to enjoying and profiting from the better type of so-called grown-up TV fare.

Groucho Threatens Drastic Step; Lots More Co. For Lassie & Co.

HOLLYWOOD . . . The private affairs of Groucho Marx have been "exposed" again in one of those "inside stuff" magazines. This prompted the NBC quiz-master to write the magazine a stinging letter: "If you don't stop this sort of thing, I'll be forced to cancel my subscription." . . . The Lassie cast will be enlarged during the coming season. New additions: a baby girl, a basset hound and a horse.

■ Gail Davis, TV's Annie Oakley, just paid $550 for a Scottish cashmere cowgirl outfit . . . George Burns, straight-faced, tells me he'll be smoking his one-millionth cigar when The Burns and Allen Show starts a new series next month.

■ Bob Cummings just packed up his whole family and took a fast trip to Hawaii when the film actors' strike prevented shooting on his TV series. "Naturally," he moans, "the minute we arrived, put on swimming suits and headed for the beach, I was handed a telegram saying the strike was settled."

■ Milton Berle and Jerry Lewis were playing golf and every time Jerry said something funny, Milton said, "I was going to say that." Finally, on the 18th hole, Jerry made a really funny joke, and when Milton again said, "I was going to say that," Jerry replied, "Don't worry. You will."

Gail Davis: Scotch cowgirl.

■ Eddie Fisher will do three TV shows from Hollywood, but not until January . . . Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy made a pilot film at the NBC studios here. And just two years ago Charlie swore he and Bergen would never do TV . . . Jim Backus, after playing Joan Davis' husband for three years on TV, has bought a house right across the street from her in Bel Air . . . I asked the master of suspense, Alfred Hitchcock, how he felt about going into TV and he replied, "Just like Shakespeare—TV or not TV, that is the question." Ouch.

■ Gordon Douglas, who directed many of the "Our Gang" comedies now being seen on TV, can't convince his little daughter that Spanky McFarland is a grown man now. She still sends him letters and wants to meet him . . . Don De Fore, who changed his mind about leaving the Ozzie and Harriet cast when his salary was upped, says he's making so much money that when he sent his check to the bank, they sent it back marked: "Insufficient funds. Us, not you."
